A Message from Sheriff Gabe Morgan

As I embarked on my fifth term in 2021, my charge that we make a difference for the citizens of Newport News led to the establishment of new partnerships and programs. Forging positive working relationships with city leaders and agencies is essential to bettering our community.

Our collaborations are creating employment opportunities for returning citizens. With assistance from my Re-entry Team, justice-involved men and women are finding good jobs with good pay and benefits in the City of Newport News, the City of Hampton, and Waterworks, just to name a few employers.

It's a win-win deal. Long-open positions vital to meeting the needs of these communities are being filled; those hired have good paying jobs with benefits and chances for advancement.

Some of them gained the necessary skills by working on the Sheriff's Workforce.

Here's a bit of history on the Sheriff's Workforce. Originally called Community Maintenance, it operated from the City Farm with personnel from Public Works and Corrections. Public Works took it over when the farm closed in 2015; Public Works turned it over to the Sheriff's Office in 2019. It was later renamed Sheriff's Workforce.

To this day, we work closely with Public Works. Some of its equipment operators are assigned to us.

Deputies supervise inmates approved for this duty. The crews take on tasks like mowing, edging and weeding, tent raising, litter clean-up and more. They even were called on to remove a homeless encampment hidden by dense bushes and grasses near downtown.

In 2021, the Sheriff's Workforce provided services that topped $1.6 million.

The NNSO is creating partnerships that work and that make a difference in the lives of incarcerated persons. These relationships lessen the burden on taxpayers, improve the quality of life for all citizens, and offer hope to those who want to change their lives. That can help reduce crime because they don't return to jail.

I am proud to have an organization that is committed to excellence. As you read this report, you will see how my staff of sworn and civilian employees are serving the community with professionalism, respect and honesty.

It remains my honor to serve as your sheriff.

Gabriel A. Morgan
Sheriff, City of Newport News

From Jail to a Job

An innovative partnership between the Newport News Sheriff's Office and the City of Newport News is putting criminal justice-involved men and women to work.

Sheriff Gabe Morgan and city officials implemented the program to identify potential candidates for jobs in Public Works.

In 2021, TV news stations profiled this groundbreaking program.

For the NNSO, the program is run by Major Tracy Hayes and her Re-entry Team.

On the inside, Maj. Hayes, re-entry specialists and re-entry counselors support people who want assistance. "It starts with letting the inmates know the services and programs are available for free. Case managers visit each block to talk with inmates or leave flyers they can look at later. Getting involved with re-entry is strictly voluntary. When the person decides to come to us for assistance, we know he's ready to do the work," Maj. Hayes stresses.

Before making a referral, the Re-Entry Team makes sure the person meets job requirements by performing background checks, screenings, and so on. Then, applications are submitted. They apply just like anyone else and are not guaranteed a position.

If necessary, the re-entry team helps the applicant with resumes, mock interviews, clothing, application assistance and transportation to and from work.

The timing for this partnership couldn't be better. Employers need employees and people who typically would need help to finding jobs are filling the need.

Each person under this initiative is affiliated with the NNSO through the Re-entry Program or the NNSO Community Crossroads, a post-incarceration substance abuse support program.

By the end of 2021, seven people had been hired; a few have even advanced.

"Just knowing they've been in that job, been able to keep that job and haven't not gotten in trouble again, that's huge for them," admits Major Hayes.

Assistance is available to any criminal justice-system involved person in Hampton Roads, not just in Newport News.

City officials like that the initiative helps make a successful transition back home. Those who are hired are proof that giving a second chance doesn't have to be a gamble for employers.

NNSO Sheriff's Workforce

Some people now working for Public Works have been part of the Sheriff's Workforce. Perhaps the most visible work they perform is mowing, edging and trimming around the city. In 2021, crews did work equal to nearly $1 million.

Their efforts not only keep the city looking nice, it helps keeps trees and shrubs from blocking the view for drivers. Maintaining open sightlines, especially on busy roads, improves safety by giving drivers, cyclists and pedestrians an unobstructed view.

While the grass and tree growth slows a bit in the winter, personnel stay busy making sure areas don't become overgrown. This constant upkeep will make nature easier to tend when the spring growing season arrives.

NNSO Sheriff's Workforce

The Sheriff's Workforce is out in the community every day.

As COVID-19 cases eased in 2021, city-sponsored events returned. Outdoor gatherings like Mayor Price's Play Ball program, the Port Warwick Art Fest and the Backyard Bash on the Super Block needed tents of all sizes put up on location.

Sheriff's Workforce personnel worked with Parks and Rec employees to coordinate the layout for each event.

Once events were over, Workforce personnel returned to take them down and store them until the next event.

Doing this work in 2021 saved taxpayers nearly $123,000.

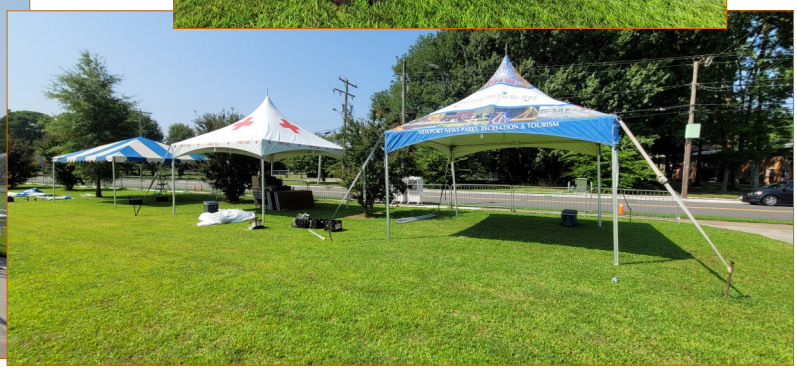

It's not as easy as it looks. Crews train often so they can efficiently raise and lower tents of every size.

NNSO Sheriff's Workforce

Whether it's removing furniture and equipment from city buildings, taking out-of-date files for secure destruction or putting down mats at Riverview Gymnastics Center, the Sheriff's Workforce is answering calls for service made to the 311 Contact Center.

City employees and citizens can alert the city to via the 311 Contact Center. Call takers route requests to the appropriate division.

In 2021, nearly 300 calls ended up on the Sheriff's Workforce's to-do list. It takes a lot of planning to respond to these issues while tending to daily tasks.

Cutting tall grass and weeds, picking up trash, debris and illegally-dumped tires, and other hazardous items are just a few of the services inmates and deputies provided.

Tire dumping usually occurs in heavily wooded areas, in lightly-traveled secluded areas or at dumpsters when businesses are closed. Taxpayers end up footing the bill to get rid of these items because the dumpers don't want to pay the disposal fees.

NNSO Sheriff's Workforce

For a variety of reasons, sometimes private property isn't always maintained to city code. Tall grass and other vegetation, abandoned or junk vehicles, and other property maintenance issues are common violations.

Citizens report areas of concern, especially ones that can be seen from the street or from the complainant's property, to the Newport News Department of Codes Compliance Department. Its stated mission is to "protect the health, safety and general welfare of the public through the administration and uniform enforcement of laws and regulations related to land use, building construction and property maintenance."

When necessary, the Sheriff's Workforce works with Codes Compliance inspectors to clean up sites throughout the city.

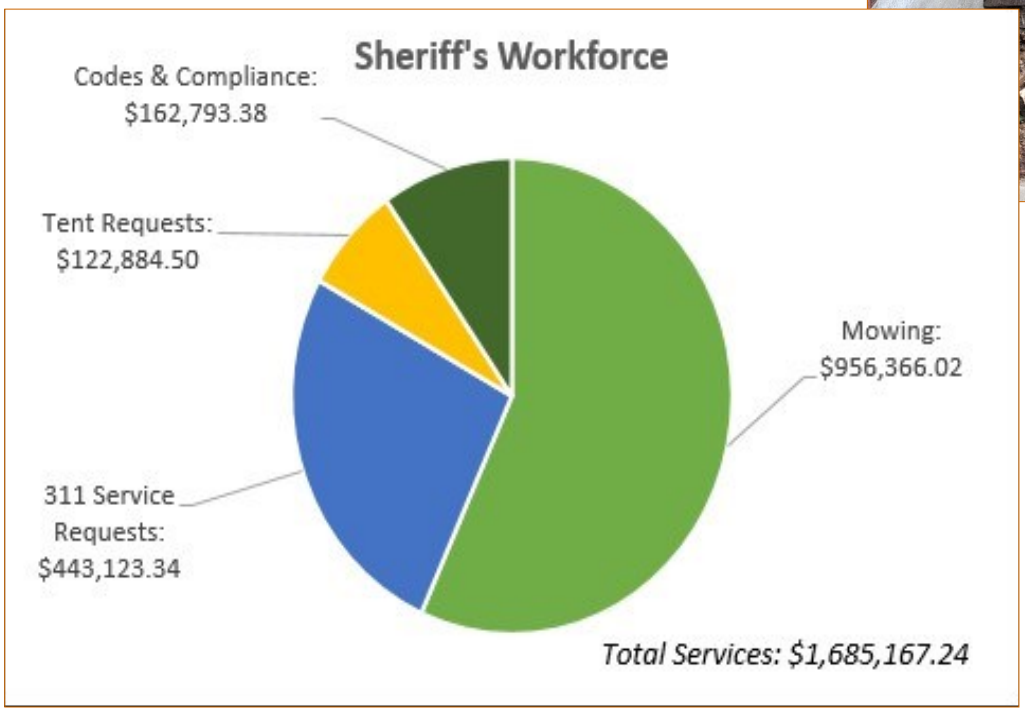

In 2021, Workforce crews handled just over 1,400 Codes Compliance reports equaling $162,793 in services provided.

Workforce inmates under the supervision of NNSO deputies gain valuable skills and experience they can use when they look for jobs after incarceration.

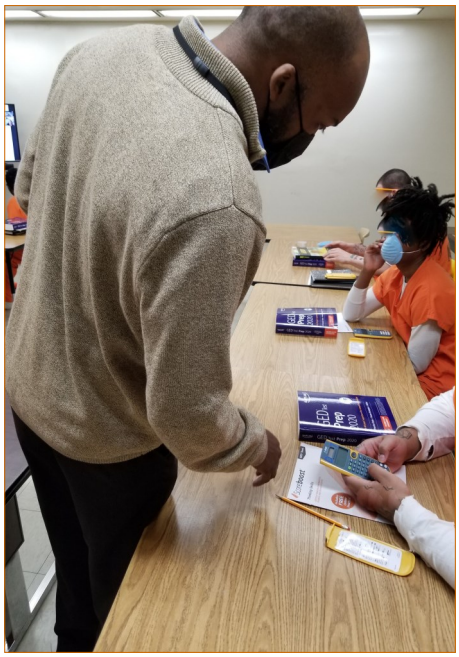

The hard work of Sheriff's Workforce personnel is paying huge dividends for the inmates and the city.

In 2021, Sheriff's Workforce services to the city totaled more than $1.6 million.

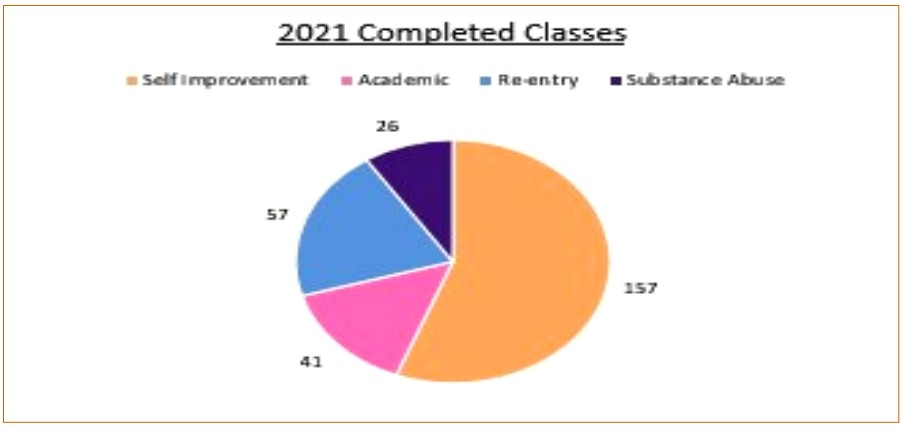

NNSO Community Services and Program

In 2021, we returned to in-person teaching as COVID cases dwindled.

Our Re-entry Team works to help inmates better themselves. Earning their GED, becoming ServSafe certified on best practices for food safety, learning to type, and other courses meet our commitment to being a good partner so they have skills to find good jobs. A few classes are court-ordered, but it's up to the inmate to take advantage of all the NNSO has to offer.

NNSO Operations-Maintenance

Maintenance is responsible for laundry, necessary repairs and other work in the NNSO.

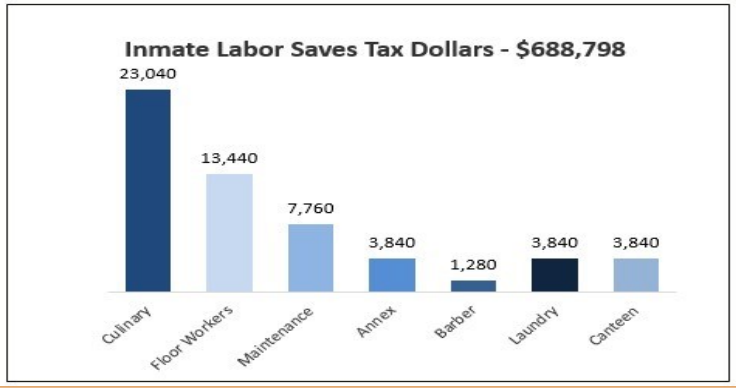

Select inmates work with NNSO staff to learn and hone skills that could help them secure employment once they return home.

Because of this division, we don't have to pay a contractor to take care of many tasks. In 2021, their work saved nearly $700,000 in tax dollars.

Through our partnership in the PORT Winter Shelter program, NNSO laundry cleans linens and blankets that are used at community homeless shelters. That's important because the homeless are among the most vulnerable to health problems.

NNSO Operations-Records

The Operations Bureau is the largest bureau of the NNNSO. Personnel assigned to Operations oversee the City Jail and Adult Detention Center (Annex). It's a 24/7/365 job to supervise, provide for and ensure the safety of inmates and our staff.

When someone is booked into the jail, we maintain detailed records on each of them — from determining their housing assignments to assessing their medical needs, from maintaining vital statistics to recording the charges that brought them into our custody. In 2021, more than 6,300 people were booked into the jail. Records show less than a quarter of them were female. Adults between the ages of 26-41 accounted for half of the inmate population; we do not house juveniles.

NNSO Operations-City Jail Accreditation

The Newport News City Jail earned its third consecutive accreditation for inmate medical care from the National Commission on Correctional Health Care (NCCHC) in 2021.

We voluntarily submit to this thorough, independent review of our medical program. We proud to have received a 100% compliance rating.

The three-year time period covered in this review was particularly challenging due to COVID-19 and we met the challenge head-on.

We set up COVID testing protocols Inside the jail as the coronavirus emerged in the community.

We worked with our medical staff and the Virginia Department of Health to keep this contagious disease from taking hold in the confined quarters of the jail.

NCCHC surveyors are health care professionals.

Reaccreditation followed a two-day, on-site review by a survey team consisting of a physician and other experts in correctional health care. They examined the Newport News City Jail to ensure it was complying with standards on continuous quality improvement, safety, infection control, chronic care, personnel and training, medical and mental health care, health records, and legal issues.

Earning the NCCHC seal of approval helps assure the community that we are responsive to the needs of those in our care.

It indicates that the NNSO and our medical provider meet high standards of care to improve inmates' health and reduce health risks when inmates re-enter the community.

Certification lasts for three years; annual reporting is among the many requirements to maintain accreditation.

NNSO Operations

As production and distribution of COVID-19 vaccinations were underway, we gave out informational materials so inmates had time to learn about the vaccine and make an informed decision.

We were among the first jails in the region to offer the inoculations to incarcerated persons. That was a priority since it's hard to maintain social distancing within the confines of the facility.

We created a list of those who said they wanted to get vaccinated. That way, we could quickly move to set up a shot clinic when the time came.

Our clinic was held in March. Planning and development was done with guidance from and under the direction of the Peninsula Health District and Sheriff Morgan.

On the day of the clinic, Capt. Janie Vergakis held a meeting to coordinate operations with deputies and health department staff.

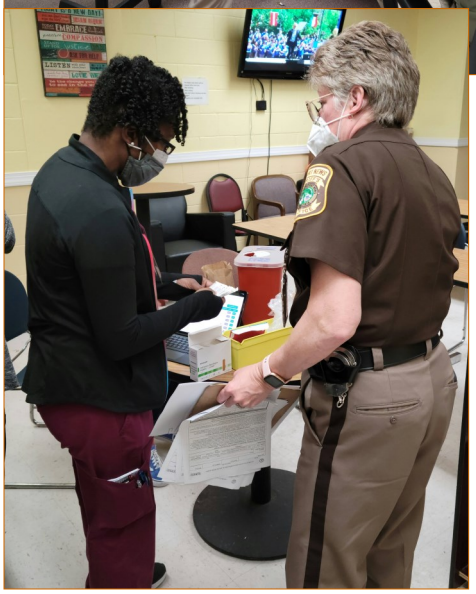

Nearly a third of the inmates had said yes to getting vaccinated, so it took most of the day to get all those shots in arms. Once the vaccinations were given, we kept track of the 15-minute wait time required to ensure no one had an adverse reaction.

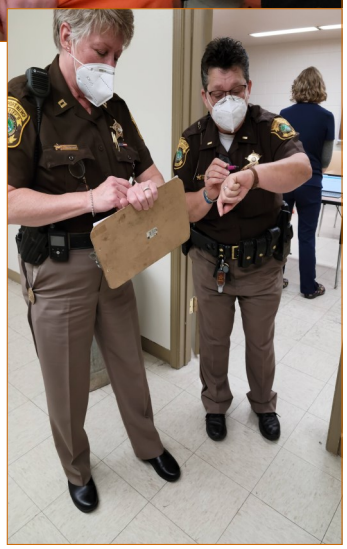

This proactive action helped reduce the chance of spread behind bars.

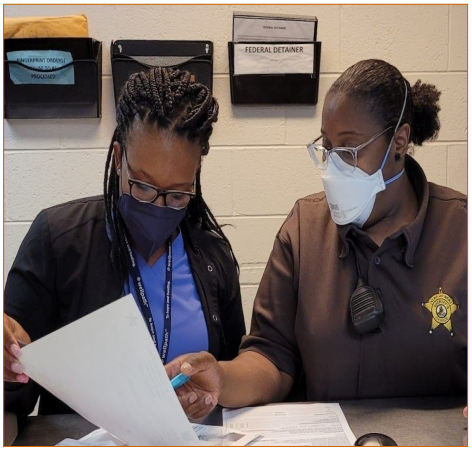

NNSO Contractual Services

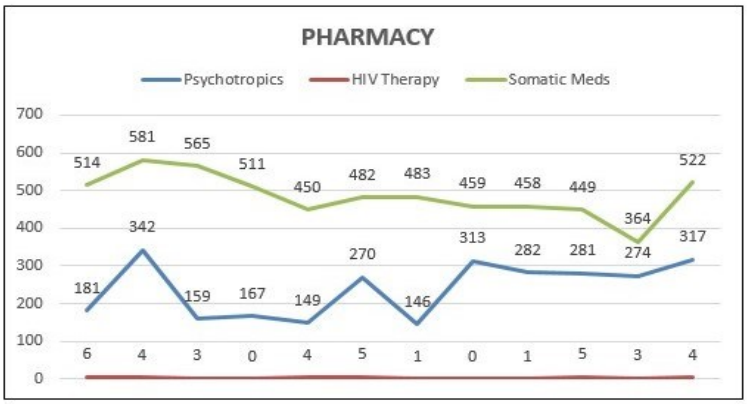

Our medical contractors assess the needs of persons brought into the Newport News City Jail to help ensure their physical and mental well-being.

In 2021, nearly two in seven inmates were taking psychotropic medications. These medications, when administered properly and under the care of medical professionals, can positively affect behavior, mood, thoughts, or perceptions.

Our medical personnel are on duty 24/7 and respond when needed to help keep them well, whether it's adjusting medications, meeting their dental needs, doing X-rays and handling general sick calls.

Health and medical personnel stay busy caring for hundreds of inmates each day. In 2021, nearly 43% of all on-site visits were for sick calls; the lowest percentage was for annual physicals.

NNSO Contractual Services

Many inmates in the Newport News City Jail are living with mental health issues. There is a system of watches in place that can help keep them and others safe, but it requires increased supervision and attention from deputies and our medical staff.

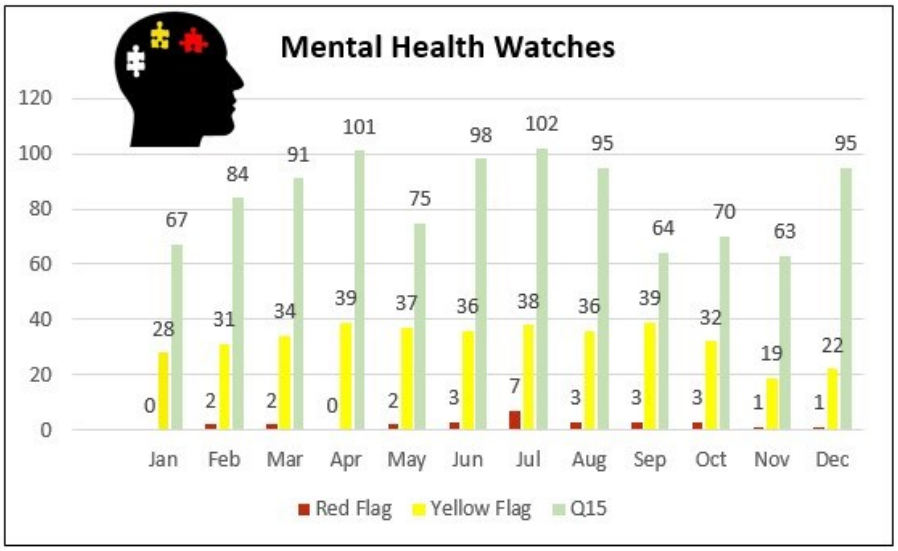

The medical personnel determine at what level an inmate may need extra supervision. Their assessments mean deputies must have "eyes on" that person.

While jails are not hospitals, it's our responsibility to treat these incarcerated persons appropriately.

Some medical conditions require more treatment than can be given at the City Jail and Annex. In those cases, which include suicide attempts, inmates need to be transported to the hospital.

If an inmate requires hospitalization, a deputy stays with him until the situation is resolved. If and when the inmate is cleared to return to the City Jail, our deputy returns with him. An inmate remains under a deputy's supervision.

There are a lot of comings and goings at the City Jail and our Operations deputies and medical staff see each of them. Officers apprehend wanted suspects and bring them in. As they arrive, others are leaving. They've either bonded out or have completed their time behind our bars.

Overall in 2021, there were a few dozen more releases than intakes.

No matter how long they stay, inmates are given three meals a day that meet their dietary needs. We adhere to state law, which requires us to provide for at least three meals daily with no more than 14 hours between evening meal and breakfast, and a minimum of two hot meals within every 24 hours. Those meals are prepared, delivered, and served under the direct supervision of our staff.

In 2021, a total of 485,268 meals were served to incarcerated persons.

NNSO Services-Courts

Transportation, Court Security and Civil Enforcement make up the Services Bureau.

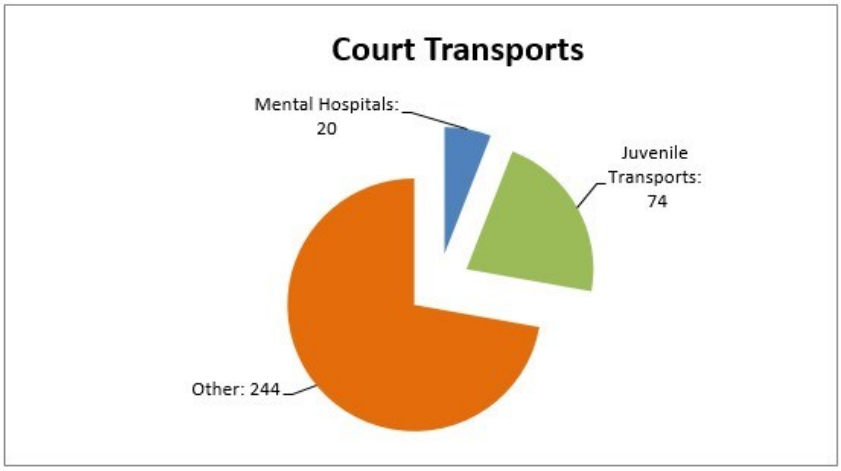

Transportation deputies move inmates to and from courts in other localities, handle out-of-state extraditions by car or commercial flights, and take incarcerated persons to medical appointments outside the jail.

Transportation also is responsible for moving individuals who are ordered by judges and magistrates to undergo mental evaluations at the hospital. These orders are known as Temporary Detention Orders and Detention Orders.

NNSO Services-Courts

There are three courthouses in Newport News containing a total of 14 courtrooms. Deputies assigned to this division are responsible for the safety of the public, judges, clerks, and attorneys who enter any of the buildings. That is done by screening the thousands of people who come through the doors and having deputies visible in the courtrooms. A deputy with his trained explosives detection K-9 work to keep the area safe. They also respond when a bomb threat is made against the courts.

When no one claims the body of a person who has died in the City of Newport News, the Services Bureau is responsible for the cremation and burial of the remains.

Before that happens, though, we work to locate a next-of-kin who may not know about the person's passing and wants to take responsibility for the body. If there is no one to claim the person, we move forward with arrangements for disposition.

In 2021, we located relatives to claim nine persons; 12 others were unclaimed.

NNSO Services-Civil Enforcement

Deputies assigned to the Courts and Civil Enforcement have the most interaction with the public.

Among the duties of deputies in Civil Enforcement is serving court-ordered papers. Those includes subpoenas, summonses, evictions, and protective orders.

The temporary federal eviction moratorium due to COVID-19 ended mid-year 2021; however, new protections for Virginians passed by the General Assembly kicked in to stop most evictions.

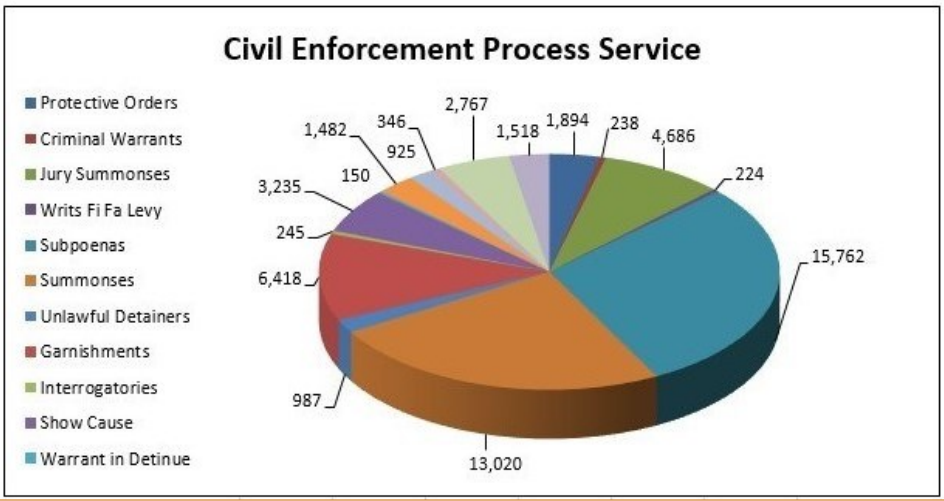

When our deputies did serve papers, they also left an Eviction Assistance flyer that we created for tenants who may need help. It lists the names and phone numbers of organizations and agencies that are ready to assist them.

NNSO Budget-Personnel

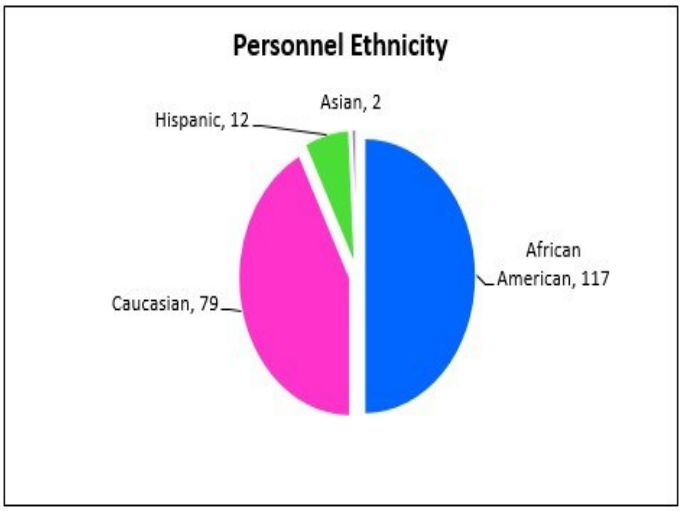

We have a job to do, but we couldn't do it without the more than 200 dedicated men and women who understand the importance of what we do day in and day out. We appreciate the city's continued support to help the NNSO hire and maintain a professional, diverse staff of public servants working in full-time and part-time positions. In 2021, men comprised 57% of the NNSO staff and women filled 43% of the positions.

NNSO Professional Standards

It's no secret that law enforcement agencies are struggling to find people to join their ranks. The NNSO is doing better than most, though, thanks to Professional Standards personnel who implement strategies for recruiting qualified people to fill sworn and civilian positions. Our deputy recruits take the oath and immediately begin training in jail operations until they are sent to the Training Academy. That's where they're tested and trained to become deputy sheriffs of the NNSO.

Being recognized as a Best for Vets Employer helps our recruiting efforts. 2021 was the fourth year making The Military Times list.

We were the only Hampton Roads law enforcement agency on the list and one of just two in Virginia.

A quarter of NNSO personnel have military connections, whether they're veterans, still serving in the Guard and Reserve, or are military spouses.

It's also the job of the Professional Standards Bureau to process all applications for concealed weapons permits.

We handled nearly 2,800 permits for new or renewal permits in 2021.

NNSO Professional Standards

The Professional Standards Bureau ensures that the integrity of the Newport News Sheriff's Office is maintained. It is responsible for staff career training here and at the Hampton Roads Criminal Justice Training Academy. The bureau also investigates complaints and, if founded, makes recommendations on how best to handle the situation.

NNSO Promotions and Retirements

2021 was a year of congratulations and farewells at the NNSO.

We celebrated the retirement of several command staff members and deputies. Their departure made room for hard working men and women to rise in rank. Each person made a positive impact to this organization and we are grateful for their loyal service.
